

Adjunct Faculty

Adjunct faculty are expected to contribute to the research, teaching, and service missions of the department. The balance among these three categories will vary with each appointment and is at the discretion of the chair. Adjunct faculty whose primary activity is research will be held to the same standards of research productivity and excellence as tenure-track faculty. Such faculty are also expected to contribute to the department's undergraduate or graduate teaching mission in some way but may not be required to teach a formal course. Adjunct faculty whose primary activity is teaching will be held to the same standards of teaching excellence as tenure-track faculty, while also being expected to remain active in research or other creative work.

Adjunct faculty are not typically expected to serve on departmental or university committees, but they are expected to be active in external professional service.